Paper Title: “The Securitization Flash Flood”

Abstract:
What caused the flood of securitized products in the years immediately preceding the crisis? This paper presents evidence that demand for safe collateral in repo markets made it attractive for financial institutions to issue securitized products. Using the 2005 Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act (BAPCPA) as a natural experiment that shocked the demand for collateral, this paper establishes collateralized borrowing in short-term debt markets as a contributing factor to the rise of mortgage securitization. Hand-collected data on underlying collateral of over 900 repurchase contracts reveals underwriters of securitized products increased use of mortgage-based repos in the months following the law change. Highlighting an important connection between repo markets and securitization activity, this paper draws attention to an unintended consequence of bankruptcy law which has important policy implications.
Steven Gray (OB) recently received the Kauffman Dissertation Fellowship Award at the American Economic Association annual meeting.

Ankit Kalda (FIN) received the Outstanding Paper Award in Behavioral Finance at Midwest Finance Association Conference (2017)

Paper Title: “Options Listing, Limited Attention & Peer Firm Value”

Abstract: This paper examines the effect of listing of equity options on industry peer stock prices and firm value. I find that options listing leads to a decline in information acquisition on peer firms as investors reallocate more of their limited resources towards listed stocks at the expense of peer stocks following listing. This reallocation leads to a decline in informational efficiency and market quality for peer stocks. Further, lower informational efficiency negatively affects firm value and profitability for peer firms. Contrary to the extant literature, these findings highlight negative externalities generated by options listing on the stock market which have important implications for industry peer firms.

Route 66: Main Street Through St. Louis

Missouri History Museum
June 25, 2016 - July 16, 2017
Admission to this exhibition is FREE

Known as the Mother Road and the Main Street of America, Route 66 plays an important role in American history and myth. The famous road also has a story to tell about the St. Louis area and how it has changed. In Route 66: Main Street Through St. Louis, the local history of this world-famous highway is explored. Come get your kicks by learning stories about the motels, custard stands, and tourist traps that could be found along the road as it passed through St. Louis. Visitors will see a number of artifacts ranging from gas pumps to roadside signs and will even get a chance to drive the road themselves.

Visit Explore St. Louis to see more events happening in the area!
